We call out to you to join us in creating art for the Earth; a global creative response to the climate crisis. Create images that offer an alternative vision; one that protects the planet and all living creatures, one that promotes equity and justice for ALL.

Make art. Sing songs. Create performances, Recite poems, Do this alone or with your families on any kind of material that is available to you. Share what you create via the pathways we have established. Demonstrate the many ways that the arts can heal, lead, transform and make change.

Over the last few decades, we have witnessed the melting of Arctic ice; the warming of the oceans; massive wildfires; dramatic changes in weather patterns; the extinction of hundreds of living creatures; a series of pandemics and now, the corona virus which is upending human behavior all over the planet, causing the disruption of economic systems at a level never seen before and death for many thousands of people. The question is; will we finally pay attention and WAKE UP before it is too late for all of us?

Please join our global effort to flood the world with art that puts forward images of healing, of caring, of repairing, of joining together to create a just and equitable world. Use whatever spaces you have; your balconies, your windows, your doorways, your roofs, any available space. Sing songs, create performances, recite poems that you have created to transmit a meaningful message, one that can be widely understood. This is no time for abstractions; it is time to use our talents on behalf of survival. This must be a worldwide effort if it is to be effective. Join us as we attempt to change the course of history.

We are launching this project in relation to Earth Day, 2020, but conceive it as ongoing into the future as our goals involve bringing the arts into any discussions about the future of our planet.

What are the major problems facing the world today? Can you create an image or images depicting those challenges? What kind of world would you like to see? How can we achieve that? Can you "picture" a world of equity and justice?

Upload your creation with your name or alias, date and media to any social media platforms of your choice and to the hashtag #CreateArtForEarth.

To make the campaign reach the widest possible public, all partners will repost on their social media select images from the hashtag #CreateArtForEarth. Any use outside of social media, the organization will get in touch with you via a relevant platform for consent.

#CreateArtForEarth is a collaborative, international campaign organized by: Judy Chicago, Jane Fonda, Hans Ulrich Obrist and Swoon in partnership with Fire Drill Fridays, Greenpeace, the NMWA and the Serpentine Galleries. It has been conceived in relation to the Serpentine’s Back to Earth project which invites leading artists, musicians, architects, poets, filmmakers, scientists, thinkers and designers to propose artworks and projects that are a call to action in response to the climate emergency. Back to Earth will run throughout the Galleries’ programs onsite, offsite and online, in 2020 and beyond.
